Front Cover Picture: Sperm penetrating the coat of the oocyte, the zona pellucida (here artificially coloured yellow). This scanning electron microscopic picture is demonstrating by high magnification a magnificent view, showing that the head already has entered the zona, whereas the midpiece and tail still are visible (coloured blue). The forward movement of the sperm is mainly driven by the revolving drill power of the head, which originates from the rotating movements of the tail.

This picture is published by friendly permission from the book "Images of Life", Scandinavian IVF Science AB, Gothenburg, Sweden. We are grateful to the author, Lennart Nilsson, for his courtesy and permission.
