

Contents

Issue 3 Volume 13 April 2015

123 Guest Editorial

Ecosystems and human well-being in the Sustainable Development Goals
SLR Wood and F DeClerck

124 Dispatches

China's new Great Wall is not for the birds
Biomass could generate carbon-negative power
Going roadless to save the Amazon
Shark-diving tourism: conservation boon or bane?
Crabs of future past
Lyme disease on the wing in California
Home batteries store solar power
Italian designers create human-to-tree burial pod
Urban development drives rapid evolutionary change
Transforming dairy farm waste into seafood

129 Write Back

Letters to the editor regarding the contents of past issues and comments on topics of current concern to Frontiers readers

132 Research Communications

Women learn more from local than global examples of the biological impacts of climate change
EJ Theobald, A Crowe, J HilleRisLambers, MP Wenderoth, and S Freeman

138 Reviews

Can polar bears use terrestrial foods to offset lost ice-based hunting opportunities?
KD Rode, CT Robbins, L Nelson, and SC Amstrup 138

Consequences of residential development for biodiversity and human well-being
L Pejchar, SE Reed, P Bixler, L Ex, and MH Mockrin 146

154 Concepts and Questions

Toward an old-growth concept for grasslands, savannas, and woodlands
JW Veldman, E Buisson, G Durigan, GW Fernandes, S Le Stradic, G Mahy, D Negreiros, GE Overbeck, RG Veldman, NP Zaloumis, FE Putz, and WJ Bond 154

Are conservation organizations configured for effective adaptation to global change?
PR Armsworth, ER Larson, ST Jackson, DF Sax, P Simonin, B Blossey, N Green, ML Klein, L Lester, TH Ricketts, MC Runge, and MR Shaw 163

170 Natural History Notes

The odd couple: interactions between a sloth and a brown jay
KD Neam

172 Frontiers Trading Post

Products, services, academic programs and courses, employment opportunities, awards, announcements, conferences, and meetings

176 Life Lines

Africa's jumping beans (and other treasures from the tamboti tree)
A Burton