
The cover illustration shows a simplified model of the moon's phases, which govern rhythms of marine life. Researchers use the marine bristle worm Platynereis dumerilii to study the impact of the moon and sun on the reproductive cycle of these worms as well as the effects of pollution on marine ecosystems. Read more about Platynereis dumerilii on page 8.

FACTS

Science News 4

PROFILE OF PLATYNEREIS DUMERILII

The third part of our series on model organisms showcases the marine bristle worm Platynereis dumerilii.

..... 8

THE START OF LIFE

At the 117th International Titisee Conference in April 2018, researchers met to discuss the journey from oocyte to embryo.

..... 10

FELLOWS

NEW PHD PROJECTS, THIRD ROUND 2017

Twelve applications for fellowships were approved and all were taken up.

..... 17

NEW PHD PROJECTS, FIRST ROUND 2018

Fifteen applications for fellowships were approved and all were taken up.

..... 32

PHD RESULTS

Twenty fellowship holders give a brief account of their results.

..... 48

MD PROJECTS

In 2017, BIF granted nine MD fellowships.

..... 59

FOUNDATION

GRACHT 2018: A FOND FAREWELL

Impressions from the 2018 Gracht seminar for alumni working in Europe.

..... 62

Perspectives: from technical assistant to professor.

..... 65

Papers in the spotlight: Camilla Engblom, Hauke Hillen, and Justus Kobschull.

..... 66

New English-language communication seminar.

..... 68

Profiles.

..... 69

A BIF fellow's guide to ... Lyon.

..... 72

An additional 106 million euros for the Institute of Molecular Biology (IMB), Mainz.

..... 73

Upcoming events.

..... 73